

Cookies Notice

The www.herema.gr (“Website”) Cookies Notice is written in the clearest way possible, so that it is comprehensible by all the users of the Website. If you have any question regarding our Cookies Notice, please contact us at dpo@herema.gr.

The Cookies Notice provides information regarding the use of Cookies by the Website and describes the available choices you have.

The Cookies Notice is subject to amendments. We recommend that you check frequently our Cookies Notice to get informed for any changes. The Cookies Notice, which is published on the Website, is the one that applies at any moment. The section entitled “Last modified on” at the end of this page states when the latest modification of the present Notice was made. Should there be any important amendment to our Cookies Notice, we will inform you with a new message during your visit to the Website. If we make any important amendment, we will ask you to accept it again.

What are cookies?

Cookies are short text files, usually consisting of letters and numbers and which are stored on your device by a website server.

Cookies can be distinguished in “Session Cookies” and “Permanent Cookies” depending on the time they remain stored on your device. “Session Cookies” are stored on your device at the moment when you visit the Website and are automatically deleted, when you close your browser. “Permanent Cookies” are stored on your device when you visit the Website and remain stored after you close your browser. “Permanent Cookies” will automatically be activated again when you open your browser again and start surfing on the Internet.

First party and third-party Cookies: Depending on the website or the domain which installs the cookie, cookies are distinguished in “first” and “third-party” cookies. First party cookies are cookies, which are installed by the website that the user visits. Third party cookies are cookies installed by a different domain than the one that the user visited. If the user visits a website, and a third company installs a cookie through this website, this will be a third-party cookie.

Why do we use cookies?

We use cookies to offer you the best browsing experience. Certain cookies are technically necessary for the proper use of the Website. Other cookies are used for functions, such as advertising and collection of statistic data. The collection of statistic data helps us design the Website based on your preferences and constantly improve it, to offer you the best experience possible.

We and/or third parties, who offer services on our behalf, categorize cookies as follows. You can deactivate each cookies category (except from the strictly necessary cookies) anytime.

Strictly necessary cookies

These cookies are essential for us to offer you the services you wish through the Website. The Website uses the following necessary cookies:

HEREMA Profile

The Hellenic Hydrocarbons and Energy Resources Management Company (HEREMA) is the competent authority in Greece for the licensing and management of key energy resources and technologies enabling the country's transition to a robust and sustainable energy system. The Company's mandate to build a bridge to a carbon-free future revolves around strategic pillars – including the exploration and production of hydrocarbons; the development of offshore wind farms (OWF); and the management of carbon capture and storage (CCS) projects. In that capacity, HEREMA embarks on multi-faceted efforts to accelerate Greece's energy transition and security.
